scientific essay from the year 2009 in the subject law criminal process criminology law enforcement grade 86 ottawa university course penal abolitionism language english abstract crime has long been a stable term with a finite definition but many modern reforms attack the foundation of retributive justice following two incidents of children killing children this paper will examine various arguments made by nils christie 2000 and louk hulsman 1986 in regards to crime this paper will describe and analyse the public and political responses to two notorious cases of the killing of children by children one in england and one in norway using the works of christie

2000 and hulsman 1986 i will present the ways in which the cases were discussed as symptomatic of wider social problems and how differently england and norway acted ultimately portraying their respective juvenile criminal justice system this paper will examine both the similarities and the differences in the reactions to the killings in england and norway arguing that while the similarities may be more obvious the differences may be more instructive on the surface both seem like similar cases but because of the different geographical locations they were handled quite differently this sets up the context of penological arguments about the emergence of a postmodern penalty to start one must understand the basis of christie s 2000 and hulsman s 1986 theories respectively nils christie 2000 argues that a nation s extent and level of punishment is a normative question in criminology the term normative defines the structures within culture which help regulate the proper function of society these structures encourage and enforce valued social activity and discourage negative acts punishment is normative because crime control executives and decision makers are both free and obliged to choose how far punishment will go the argument christie 2000 raises is that contemporary crime control values the prison industrial complex expansion big business and continued incarceration because society fears any alternative
