The World in Flames 2017-09-12 a memoir of growing up with blind african american parents in a segregated cult preaching the imminent end of the world when the world in flames begins in 1970 jerry walker is six years old his consciousness revolves around being a member of a church whose beliefs he finds not only confusing but terrifying composed of a hodgepodge of requirements and restrictions including a prohibition against doctors and hospitals the underpinning tenet of herbert w armstrong s worldwide church of god was that its members were divinely chosen and all others would soon perish in rivers of flames the substantial membership was ruled by fear intimidation and threats anyone who dared leave the church would endure hardship for the remainder of this life and eternal suffering in the next the next life according to armstrong would arrive in 1975 three years after the start of the great tribulation jerry would be eleven years old jerry s parents were particularly vulnerable to the promise of relief from the world s hardships when they joined the church in 1960 they were living in a two room apartment in a dangerous chicago housing project with the first four of their seven children and most significantly they both were blind having lost their sight to childhood accidents they took comfort in the belief that they had been chosen for a special afterlife even if it meant following a religion with a white supremacist ideology and dutifully sending tithes to armstrong whose church boasted more than 100 000 members and more than 80 million in annual revenues at its height when the prophecy of the 1972 great tribulation does not materialize jerry is considerably less disappointed than relieved when the 1975 end time prophecy also fails he finally begins to question his faith and imagine the possibility of choosing a destiny of his own

A World in Flames 2022-09-13 masterfully told marked by irony and humor as well as outrage and a barely contained sadness jerald walker s street shadows is the story of a young man s descent into the thug life and the wake up call that led to his finding himself again walker was born in a chicago housing project and raised along with his six brothers and sisters by blind parents of modest means but middle class aspirations a boy of great promise whose parents and teachers saw success in his future he seemed destined to fulfill their hopes but by age fourteen like so many of his friends he found himself drawn to the streets by age seventeen he was a school dropout a drug addict and a gangbanger his life spiraling toward the violent and premature end all too familiar to african american males and then came the blast of gunfire that changed everything his coke dealing friend greg was shot to death less than an hour after walker scored a gram from him twenty five years later tossing the drug out the window is still the second most difficult thing i ve ever done the most difficult thing is still that i didn t follow it so begins the story told in alternating time frames of the journey that walker took to become the man he is today a husband father teacher and writer but his struggle to escape the long shadows of the streets was not easy there were racial stereotypes to overcome his own as well as those of the very white world he found himself in and a hard grappling with the meaning of race that came to an unexpected climax on a trip to africa an eloquent account of how the past shadows but need not determine the present street shadows is the opposite of a victim narrative walker casts no blame except upon himself sheds no tears except for those who have not shared his good fortune and refuses the temptations of self pity and self exoneration in the end what jerald walker has written is a stirring portrait of two americas one hopeless the other inspirational embodied within one man

Patton's War 2021-07-18 Carl Safina has been hailed as one of the top 100 conservations of the 20th century Audubon magazine and a sea in flames is his blistering account of the months long manmade disaster that tormented a region and mesmerized the nation traveling across the gulf to make sense of an ever changing story and its often nonsensical twists Safina expertly deconstructs the series of calamitous misjudgments that caused the Deepwater Horizon blowout zeroes in on BP's misstatements evasions and denials reassesses his own reaction to the government's crisis handling and reviews the consequences of the leak and what he considers the real problems which the press largely overlooked Safina takes us deep inside the faulty thinking that caused the lethal explosion we join him on aerial surveys across an oil coated sea we confront pelicans and other wildlife whose blue universe fades to black Safina skewers the excuses and the silly jargon like junk shot and top kill that made the tragedy feel like a comedy of horrors and highlighted Big Oil's appalling lack of preparedness for an event that was inevitable based on extensive research and interviews with fishermen coastal residents biologists and government officials a sea in flames has some surprising answers on whether it was Obama's Katrina whether the Coast Guard was as inept in its response as BP was misleading and whether this worst unintended release of oil in history was really America's worst ecological disaster impassioned moving and even sharply funny a sea in flames is ultimately an indictment of America's main addiction Safina writes in the end this is a chronicle of a summer of pain and hope hope that the full potential of this catastrophe would not materialize hope that the harm done would heal faster than feared and hope that even if we didn't suffer the absolutely worst we'd still learn the big lesson here we may have gotten two out of three that's not good enough because there'll be a next time
