there has been a growing acceptance that food has an important role in establishing and structuring social and kin relations in south east asian societies this study looks at a wide variety of groups in the region and demonstrates that within all of them the feeding relationship is fundamental to the establishment and the nature of relations within generations and between generations presenting material from ten societies in the region the papers included in this volume argue that the feeding of foods drink and meals based on the focal starch crop grown by these agricultural groups rice in eight of the groups covered here sago in one and cassava in one is used to manipulate biological kinship and to construct a kinship particular to humans which is nevertheless founded in a natural process the flow of life blessings and potency between generations

it is the stated intention of this volume on gender and nation in south eastern europe to challenge the image of an antagonistic inside and outside the authors do not only argue from various geographical points of view from within and without the region including bulgaria the kosovo serbia romania croatia as well as austria germany and the united states they also argue from different scientific points of view and scholarly traditions be it in the vein of donna haraway s standpoint of epistemology a multi sited ethnography or in reference to dialogical models they raise their voices on sexist patriarchalism and thus on the relationship of gender and nation on which the specific phenomenon of regional nationalisms is based the editors subscribe to an open definition of gender as a social and cultural localisation of perceptions of sex the perception of biological sex is thus not ignored here on the contrary its social and political role is particularly apparent when neo liberal discourses of masculinity and femininity make reference to a natural sex the question of socio cultural gender differences the ideals on which the categories man and woman are based and their forced or enabled embedding through a regional historical or political environment are thus central the fact that the understanding of masculinity and femininity varies according to the respective local reproductive regimes is self evident in part one this volume is introduced in two contributions on the theoretical complex of gender and nation they provide a glance at this web of meanings over time and space and explain why this relationship is so vital why it inevitably leads to the inclusion of the male self and the exclusion of the female other ideological constructions and structural relationships develop and change based on a background of concrete historical events and in the course of specific social transformation processes the essays in part two then delve into a discussion of regional and historical forms and effects they demonstrate how the relationship has effected the consolidation and national self definition processes of the countries of south eastern europe and to what specific forms of inequality between social and cultural groups this is leading or has led historically anchored the inevitable relationship of gender and nation leads not only to the subordination of women in all nation states at the same time it allows nations to develop and survive on the basis of the inequality of the sexes
