in november 2005 bonnie blodgett was whacked with a nasty cold after a quick shot of a popular nasal spray up each nostril the back of her nose was on fire with that blodgett a professional garden writer devoted to the sensual pleasures of garden and kitchen was launched on a journey through the senses the psyche and the sciences her olfactory nerve was destroyed perhaps forever she had lost her sense of smell phantosmia a constant stench of every disgusting thing you can think of tossed into a blender and pureed is the first disorder s the brain s attempt as blodgett vividly conveys to compensate for loss by conjuring up a tortured facsimile as the hallucinations fade and anosmia no smell at all moves in to take their place blodgett is beset by questions why are smell and mood hand in hand how are smell disorders linked to other diseases what is taste without flavor blodgett s provocative conversations with renowned geneticists smell dysfunction experts neurobiologists chefs and others ultimately lead to a life altering understanding of smell and to the most transformative lesson of all the olfactory nerve in ways unlike any other in the human body has the extraordinary power to heal one of barack obama s best books of 2020 winner of the anisfield wolf book award shortlisted for the 2021 carnegie medal in non fiction this will be read for many many years to come as a classic not just of the memoir genre but of contemporary writing simon schama the work of a poet a great poet financial times a must read classic mary karr trethewey writes elegantly trenchantly intimately as well about the fraught history of the south and what it means live at the intersection of america s struggle between blackness and whiteness and what in our troubled republic is a subject more evergreen mitchell s jackson natasha trethewey was born in mississippi in the 60s to a black mother and a white father when she was six natasha s parents divorced and she and her mother moved to atlanta there her mother met the man who would become her second husband and natasha s stepfather while she was still a child natasha decided that she would not tell her mother about what her stepfather did when she was not there the quiet bullying and control the games of cat and mouse her mother kept her own secrets secrets that grew harder to hide as natasha came of age when natasha was nineteen and away at college her stepfather shot her mother dead on the driveway outside their home with penetrating insight and a searing voice that moves from the wrenching to the elegiac memorial drive is a compelling and searching look at a shared human experience of sudden loss and absence and a piercing glimpse at the enduring ripple effects of white racism and domestic abuse luminous urgent and visceral it cements trethewey s position as one of the most important voices in america today excerpt from physiology of the special senses i hope that this volume may be of service to two classes of readers students of psychology may desire to obtain more information regarding the physiological side of the senses than is usually found in works professedly dealing with psychology i think such students will find this book of use if they read it in conjunction with professor myers admirable treatise on experimental psychology another class of readers which i have had in mind are those who are either taking up physiology as a branch of liberal education or with a view of presenting themselves for certain higher professional examinations in either case a somewhat more detailed knowledge of physiology is required than can be obtained from the general textbooks of the subject while time hardly permits of much
