human rights power and civic action examines the interrelationship between struggles for human rights and the dynamics of power focusing on situations of poverty and oppression in developing countries it is argued that the concept of power is a relatively neglected one in the study of rights based approaches to development especially the ways in which structures and relations of power can limit human rights advocacy therefore this book focuses on how local and national struggles for rights have been constrained by power relations and structural inequalities as well as the extent to which civic action has been able to challenge alter or transform such power structures and simultaneously to enhance protection of people s basic human rights contributors examine and compare struggles to advance human rights by non governmental actors in cambodia china ghana kenya south africa and zimbabwe the country case studies analyse structures of power responsible for the negation and denial of human rights as well as how rights promoting organisations challenge such structures utilising a comparative approach the book provides empirically grounded studies leading to new theoretical understanding of the interrelationships between human rights struggles power and poverty reduction human rights power and civic action will be of interest to students and scholars of human rights politics power development and governance trading places is about urban land markets in african cities it explores how local practice land governance and markets interact to shape the ways that people at society s margins access land to build their livelihoods the authors argue that the problem is not with markets per se but in the unequal ways in which market access is structured they make the case for more equal access to urban land markets not only for ethical reasons but because it makes economic sense for growing cities and towns if we are to have any chance of understanding and intervening in predominantly poor and very unequal african cities we need to see land and markets differently new migrants to the city and communities living in slums are as much a part of the real estate market as anyone else they re just not registered or officially recognised trading places highlights the land practices of those living on the city s margins and explores the nature and character of their participation in the urban land market it details how the urban poor access hold and trade land in the city and how local practices shape the city and reconfigures how we understand land markets in rapidly urbanising contexts rather than developing new policies which aim to supply land and housing formally but with little effect on the scale of the need it advocates an alternative approach which recognises the local practices that already exist in land access and management in this way the agency of the poor is strengthened and households and communities are better able to integrate into urban economies one might believe that museum studies is a stable field of academic inquiry based on a set of familiar institutional forms and functions but as institutions museums have never been stable or singular and neither has the discipline of museum studies museum studies as a field of academic inquiry has received little critical attention one result of this neglect has arguably been a lack of invention in museum studies another is the distancing of academic museum studies from museum practice doing museology differently charts a different course a critical creative reflection on academic practice the book takes the form of a narrative account of museological fieldwork a research story unfolds challenging academic conventions at the level of its own presentation the book combines critical museum visiting with an autobiographical voice the identification of a previously underexplored interdisciplinary space leads the author to experiment with museum studies using contemporary developments in the theory and practice of human geography the new approaches to museological research and representation that emerge from this unique inquiry challenge assumed institutional and intellectual boundaries and act as a call to further creative experimentation
